A successful study abroad program incorporates learning objectives with the unique characteristics of the host country. It offers hands-on clinical experience, as well as fun cultural excursions. Start promotional activities early is key in filling up the program. Pay attention to local news and anticipate potential risks. Think about back-up plans and emergency responses before the program starts. Carefully calculate program costs and stay within budget is crucial to maintain good relationships with on-site partners, students, and the college administrators.

CVM International Programs is here to provide the resources and assistance you need to develop sustainable international opportunities. Contact us at cv mip@iastate.edu.